

NATURAL BEAUTY

A monochrome floor doesn't strictly have to be black and white. Just as glamorous and effective is to choose another pairing of light and dark neutrals – the result will just be softer and subtler. Studio Indigo was inspired by the chequerboard floor of the Painted Hall of Chatsworth House in Derbyshire when it came to decorating the double-height entrance hall of a townhouse in Notting Hill and its chequerboard floors have the unique appeal of being at once timeless and modern. A calm and soothing space, the floor is a mixture of a cream- and chocolate-coloured polished English stone, the colour of which has been alluded to in the polished plaster walls.

PHOTOGRAPH ANDREAS VON EINSEIDEL